

Dear Sir or Madam:

It is my understanding that the National Association of Broadcasters have petitioned (04-160) to limit what can be broadcast on satellite radio. This is patently absurd. The satellite radio is a new, exciting innovation. I never thought that I would ever buy in, but I certainly have. It is both extremely enjoyable and very useful during our travels across the United States. It is often difficult to find local broadcasts that can meet our needs as we travel. Satellite radio fulfills the need, both locally and when we travel to the Midwest, South and Eastern United States. Traffic and weather conditions can be easily found for example.

Artificial limitations should not be insituted to simply make it convenient to other broadcasters by minimizing competition. There would not appear to be any constitutional basis for such a limitation.

The ability to better serve the customer should be the prime concern in deciding this matter.

Accordingly, the petion should be rejected.

Sincerely,

Ernest Liska
